

About Vitamink2.org

VitaminK2.org is the collective work of an international community seeking to explore and understand the emerging role of natural vitamin K2 and human health.

The mission of the International Health and Science Foundation (ISHF) is to improve the quality of life by providing proper knowledge and supporting the development of science. To that end, ISHF developed a website – VitaminK2.org – as a credible and reliable source of current medical knowledge and the latest research on the properties of vitamin K2. Visitors are given the opportunity to consciously counteract the negative changes in the skeletal system and the circulatory system through open access to articles and tips for a healthy lifestyle. ISHF’s goal is to build awareness of the great healing properties of Vitamin K2 – not only for adults, but also for children.

Further, Vitamink2.org is intended to be a resource for all – consumers and medical professionals alike. Every visitor has access to the latest information pertaining to vitamin K2, from research and analysis, to ideas about attaining a healthy lifestyle. And should a visitor not find what they are searching for, we encourage them to use our Contact Form to reach out to one of our experts to answer their specific question.

